Dear Representative:

We are writing to express concerns about and opposition to most of the pieces of legislation before the Committee today. These bills include numerous ill-considered deregulatory measures which would significantly reduce protections for consumers and for the financial system as a whole.

AFR and AFR member organizations have written separate detailed letters opposing seven of these bills. We link to those letters below, and briefly discuss two additional bills (HR 2091 and HR 2287) for the first time.

HR 1941 would ban the exercise of independent judgement by bank examiners in assessing important threats to bank solvency. It would also add an entirely new additional appeals process to the existing agency appeals process for examination findings. This appeals process would greatly expand the delay and difficulty of getting banks to take action on supervisory findings by both prudential regulators and the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. The legislation would affect supervision of banks of all sizes, including the largest Wall Street banks.

HR 766 and HR 1413 would inappropriately restrict regulatory anti-fraud efforts under “Operation Choke Point”, efforts which target banks that have knowingly facilitated access by scammers and fraudsters to consumer bank accounts.

HR 1210 would greatly weaken new ‘ability to repay’ standards for mortgage loans, standards which are designed to protect consumers against the kind of toxic and exploitative mortgage loans which helped cause the financial crisis and led to massive consumer losses.

HR 1266 would change the governance structure of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) from a single director to a five-member commission, reducing the agency’s effectiveness and significantly increasing the risk of gridlock regarding issues important to consumers.

HR 1737 would place unnecessary restrictions on CFPB oversight of auto lending practices, including interest rate markups that cost consumers tens of billions of dollars and have been found to violate fair lending practices through a differential impact on minority purchasers of automobiles.

HR 2213 would insulate lenders from legal accountability when they make misleading disclosures to homeowners. The legislation would prevent enforcement of important new mortgage disclosure rules until January 1, 2016, meaning that homeowners who received misleading and deceptive disclosures during the first five months disclosure rules were in effect would have no legal recourse.

HR 2091 eliminates the 10 day notice period to consumers when consumer reports, such as 'income estimator' products, used to determine income for the purpose of determining child support. These income estimator products can be potentially inaccurate and can lead to overestimates of income. The 10 day notice period gives consumers an opportunity to contest such overestimates, which can have significant consequences in the case of child support awards. The bill also expands the purposes for which these "income estimator" products can be used by child support agencies, where again, overestimates could lead to harmful consequences.

HR 2287 would require the National Credit Union Administration to take public comments on its budget allocations prior to finalizing a budget. Setting an agency budget is a crucial exercise of managerial discretion and regulated entities should not be given a direct statutory role in setting regulatory agency budget priorities. The NCUA already provides extensive information and transparency on the details of its budget to the public.

Sincerely,

Americans for Financial Reform
