

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau has done crucial work to safeguard Americans against the deceptive and abusive practices of big banks, student loan servicers, credit card companies, and predatory lenders. Congress must protect this important work, not seek to grind it to a halt by gutting its funding, hamstringing its independence, or seeking to unseat the Bureau's hard working Director, Richard Cordray.

I urge you to oppose any efforts to weaken the Bureau and its critically important role. All Americans, including the more than 40 million with student loans, must be able to count on the protection that only a strong, independent Consumer Financial Protection Bureau can provide.
