

AFR Americans for Financial Reform

March 2, 2016

Dear Representative,

On behalf of Americans for Financial Reform, we are writing here to express our opposition to HR 4096, the “Investor Clarity and Bank Parity Act”, as it is currently drafted.¹ HR 4096 would create a new exemption to Volcker Rule restrictions on naming practices for investment funds advised by banks or their affiliates. Currently, the Volcker Rule prevents a fund associated with a bank from being named after the bank holding company or any of its affiliates, since such a name could create an inappropriate inference that the fund was sponsored by the bank and might receive assistance from it in the event of losses. HR 4096 would relax this prohibition by permitting funds to be named after bank affiliates that did not share the name of the overall holding company, were not a depository institution, and did not own a depository institution.

We do not object to a statutory change that permits greater regulatory discretion than currently available in granting exceptions to the naming prohibition. But we are concerned that the statutory exemption in HR 4096 could in some cases permit funds to be named after significant bank affiliates that the markets strongly associate with the overall holding company, creating a reputational risk to the bank if the fund failed, and an inference of implicit sponsorship.

For example, Merrill Lynch, although it is not a depository institution, is so significant to and closely associated with Bank of America that the failure of funds closely associated with Merrill Lynch could be problematic for Bank of America. In general, bank owned broker dealer and swap dealer affiliates that are not themselves depository institutions play an important role in financial markets and it is possible that a fund named after such an entity may create an inappropriate inference of sponsorship by the larger holding company.

While such cases may be rare, regulators should retain the ability to address them. We would withdraw our objection to HR 4096 if the bill were modified to grant regulators discretion over the decision of whether or not to grant the specific exemption from naming restrictions laid out in the bill. Absent such a change we oppose the bill.

Thank you for your consideration. For more information please contact AFR’s Policy Director, Marcus Stanley at marcus@ourfinancialsecurity.org or 202-466-3672.

Sincerely,

Americans for Financial Reform
