Nearly 35,000 Petition Signatures on a Public Call to Protect Public Money for the Public Good by Fully Banning CHIPS and Science Act Grantees from Engaging in Stock Buybacks

The 2022 CHIPS and Science Act represents a huge opportunity to bolster domestic semiconductor production, create good paying jobs, and encourage more equitable and sustainable corporate practices.

To maximize the benefits of this program and ensure taxpayer dollars are used as intended, the Department of Commerce must take advantage of its statutory authority to fully ban CHIPS grant recipients from engaging in stock buybacks as a condition of their awards. Agreements should also include strong accountability measures if grant recipients engage in stock buybacks in violation of the ban.

A new report from the Institute for Policy Studies and Americans for Financial Reform Education Fund reveals a troubling pattern among companies in line for CHIPS Act grants.

The first 11 corporations to sign preliminary CHIPS agreements with the Department of Commerce, in line for nearly $30 billion in subsidies, spent a staggering $41 billion on stock buybacks between 2019 and 2023 -- enough to have given 300,000 hardworking employees a $27,541 bonus every year for five years.

Stock buybacks artificially inflate the value of company shares (and the value of executive stock-based pay) while siphoning resources from worker wages, R&D, and other productive investments. This practice primarily benefits wealthy shareholders and executives, and many are sitting on personal stock holdings worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

The Biden administration has taken steps to discourage buybacks by giving preferential treatment to firms that agree to forgo them but without explicit restrictions, there's a big risk that companies could take billions in CHIPS grants, move some money around, and then engage in more stock buybacks. Workers lose, corporate greed wins, and we just can't let that happen with our taxpayer dollars.

Sincerely,

[34,512 signatures attached]
