Dear Member of Congress,

We are writing on behalf of Americans for Financial Reform to express our strong support for President Obama's proposal in the 2014 budget to increase funding for the Commodity Futures Trading Commission to $315 million.<sup>1</sup> In addition, we strongly support the President's proposal to give the CFTC authority to charge user fees to fund the agency. This would remove deficit concerns in setting the agency's budget.

Funding the CFTC at the requested level is vitally important to enabling it to do its job: protecting the US and global economy through effective oversight of some of the most critical and central areas of our commodity and financial markets. The CFTC's role in regulating commodity markets is vital to businesses that use commodity markets to hedge risks, vital to the economic well-being of American families who rely on affordable prices for products like gasoline and food, and vital to overall financial stability.

Beyond the CFTC's traditional role of overseeing commodity markets, its duties were greatly expanded by the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform Act. With the passage of that legislation in 2010, Congress made the CFTC responsible for much of the oversight of the unregulated derivatives markets that helped crash the world economy during the 2008 financial crisis. The CFTC is now responsible for approximately $300 trillion in previously unregulated swaps markets -- an eight-fold increase in the notional value of the market the CFTC must supervise.

The request of $315 million is minuscule in comparison to the roughly $37 trillion U.S. futures market and $300 trillion U.S. swaps market supervised by the CFTC. Yet the CFTC's current funding level of $206 million is inadequate to perform the core functions of the agency. A further sequestration cut of $11 million will only compound this problem. Far from saving money, underfunding the CFTC undermines effective oversight of our financial markets and creates the potential for far greater economic damage. Derivatives were central to the 2008-2009 financial crisis, which Government Accountability Office recently found to have cost the American economy as much as $13 trillion. The crisis led to the loss of millions of jobs, a decline of almost 40 percent in the net worth of the typical American family, and a massive increase in government debt.

<sup>1</sup> Americans for Financial Reform is an unprecedented coalition of more than 250 national, state and local groups who have come together to reform the financial industry. Members of our coalition include consumer, civil rights, investor, retiree, community, labor, faith based and business groups.

Over the past few years, the CFTC has demonstrated that it uses its funding effectively. The agency has completed some 80 percent of its derivatives rules, putting it far ahead of larger, better funded agencies in moving toward implementation of the Dodd-Frank Act and bringing certainty to market participants. The CFTC played a critical leadership role in revealing large-scale manipulation of LIBOR interest rates, one of the most significant cases of financial market manipulation in modern history. Settlements in the LIBOR case alone have brought $2 billion to the U.S. Treasury, with more to come.

Full funding for the CFTC is a necessity for effective financial market oversight and for the safety of our financial system. We urge you to take a stand for effective oversight of our financial system and fully fund this agency.

Sincerely,

Americans for Financial Reform
