Dear Representative,

On behalf of Americans for Financial Reform, we are writing to express our opposition to HR 1038, the “Public Power Risk Management Act”.¹ This legislation would make it easier for major dealers in the energy markets to avoid appropriate designation as swaps dealers, and would also remove important protections for public utilities in their swaps transactions. For these reasons, and also because the Commodity Futures Trading Commission has already granted significant relief to public utilities, HR 1038 should be rejected.

In order to ensure that public entities receive various business conduct and fair dealing protections that registered dealers are required to provide in complex derivatives transactions, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) has required all dealers with over $25 million in notional transactions with public entities to register as swaps dealers with the Commission. This ‘de minimis’ threshold is far lower than the current threshold of $8 billion in notional transactions with private entities that triggers dealer registration when transacting with private counterparties.

HR 1038 would define publicly owned utilities as private entities for the purposes of de minimis registration thresholds, meaning that dealers transacting with public utilities would not have to register until they reached $8 billion in notional swaps business. Thus, many dealers transacting with public utilities would remain unregistered and would not be required to observe various business conduct, fair dealing, and risk management rules that protect the counterparties of registered dealers.

The motivation for this legislation is the claim that some energy derivatives dealers, hoping to avoid registration with the CFTC as swaps dealers, are refusing to deal with public utilities. This legislation is a misguided response to this issue, for three reasons:

- First, the appropriate response would be to lower the $8 billion de minimis threshold or otherwise change registration rules for energy dealers generally, so that there is less incentive for important dealers in this market to seek to avoid registration.²

² A recent letter to the CFTC signed by all six West Coast Senators has called for precisely this action.

- Instead, HR 1038 would compound the CFTC's error in creating an overly high $8 billion registration threshold for private swaps transactions by extending the $8 billion threshold to public utilities. Swaps transactions by public utilities potentially risk taxpayer money and should be protected from exploitation by the business conduct and risk management rules that registered dealers must follow.
- Finally, the CFTC has already responded to this issue and provided significant exemptions to public utilities. For example, the Commission has effectively raised the 'de minimis' threshold for dealings with public utilities to $800 million, meaning that any dealer with notional transactions with public utilities of less than $800 million need not register with the Commission.³ The CFTC has also exempted all swaps transactions between public power companies from swaps regulations generally.⁴

For these reasons, we urge you to oppose HR 1038. Thank you for your consideration. For more information please contact AFR's Policy Director, Marcus Stanley at marcus@ourfinancialsecurity.org or at 202-466-3672.

Sincerely,

Americans for Financial Reform
