Dear Representative:

On behalf of Americans for Financial Reform (AFR) we are writing in strong opposition to the addition of language to H.R. 1195 that would pay for new procedural requirements on the CFPB by cutting or capping its budget, thereby reducing its ability to carry out its important consumer protection mission. This action would be a serious mistake in and of itself, and it would set an extremely dangerous precedent for limiting the Consumer Bureau's budget – and its effectiveness – by imposing new requirements on the Bureau and then using them as a vehicle for eroding its funding.

This amendment transforms this bill into a significant attack on the Consumer Bureau by 'paying for' the additional requirements by placing a ceiling on the CFPB's budget, effectively diminishing the resources available to the Bureau to do its job.

Whatever your views of this procedural proposal, paying for it by capping or reducing the CFPB's budget changes the legislation dramatically. With this addition, the new version of the legislation creates a new requirement for the Consumer Bureau, and then takes away the funding necessary to pay for it, undermining the proposition that the review panel is simply an additional layer of consultation, and turning the proposal into a Trojan Horse designed to limit the Consumer Bureau's work. The bill demands that the Bureau take additional procedural steps, but then puts a ceiling on the Bureau's funding, cutting the resources to implement it. So, it turns the legislation into a budget cut for the CFPB, and one that is particularly dangerous because it would provide a model for further such budget cuts.

The CFPB is doing good and important work making consumer finance markets fairer and safer. In addition to putting crucial new rules in place to prevent the kinds of abuses that were at the heart of the financial crisis, it is taking on predatory practices in areas like payday lending that cost vulnerable consumers many billions of dollars a year, and holding companies that break the law accountable; CFPB actions have resulted in firms returning more than $5.3 billion to more than 15 million consumers harmed by tricks and traps in the financial marketplace. The public – across party lines – overwhelmingly supports the mission of the CFPB, and supports the kinds of action it has taken.

We strongly urge you to oppose the rule on this legislation. The CFPB's consumer protection task is hugely important, and cuts to its budget would impair its ability to move forward with protecting consumers and the economy.

Sincerely,

Americans for Financial Reform
