Dear Representative,

On behalf of Americans for Financial Reform (AFR), we are writing in opposition to HR 414, the “Burdensome Data Collection Relief Act”.¹ This legislation would eliminate the requirement in Section 953(b) of the Dodd-Frank Act that firms publicly disclose the ratio between the pay of their chief executive officer and the pay of the median worker at the firm. The SEC has recently completed the rulemaking to implement this rule, and investors and the public are now anticipating that that important data will become available.

The repeal of Section 953(b) is completely unjustified, particularly in an era of rising inequality and soaring CEO pay. Wage differentials within firms affect firm performance and are therefore material information to investors.² They are also material information for the significant number of investors who prioritize social impact in their investment choices, and may wish to consider firm wage-setting practices as part of their investment decision.

The information required to report the Section 953(b) pay ratio should not be ‘burdensome’ for firms to collect. Clearly, firms must already gather employee wage information simply in order to pay their workers. Determining the wage of the median worker simply requires drawing one metric from this already available information.

We urge you to oppose HR 414, which would reverse an important reform that will shine new light on company pay practices. This reform is significant to many investors and to the broader public.

Sincerely,

Americans for Financial Reform

¹ Americans for Financial Reform is a coalition of more than 200 national, state and local groups who have come together to reform the financial industry. Members of our coalition include consumer, civil rights, investor, retiree, community, labor, faith based and business groups. A list of AFR member groups is available at <http://ourfinancialsecurity.org/about/our-coalition/>
